

Fair Value Gap Trading Strategy (4H and 15 Min)

Bullish Example

Wait for a Fair Value Gap (FVG) to form on the 4H chart as shown below.

Wait for price to return to the 4H FVG on the 15 min chart. Price should quickly shoot off once hitting the 4H FVG and leave a new smaller FVG on the 15 minute chart as shown below.

Enter on that 15 min FVG that is formed. Your stop loss should be at the swing low and you should target at most a 3RR. A 2RR is also great.

This is a simple high probability trading model which combines the higher time frames (4H) with the lower time frames (15 Min). I would recommend using this on multiple pairs to give you more setups.

Bearish Example

Wait for a FVG to form on the 4H chart as shown below.

Wait for price to return to the 4H FVG on the 15 min and form a new FVG as shown below. Price consolidates before dropping in the London session. This is normal.

Enter on the new FVG that is formed, in this example we are bearish so we short. Place your stop at the swing high and aim for a 2 or 3RR.

This is an easy high probability trading model. Both the 4H and 15 min FVG should be in the same direction.

Risk at most 1% per trade with this model.

Don't forget to backtest this model to build up your confidence!

If you want to take this even further and truly master trading, here's something special for you...

Here's How to Take Your Trading to the Next Level

You now have a high-probability trading model to start using right away. But one strategy isn't enough—you need a complete system that makes trading effortless and a mindset that eliminates hesitation, fear, and self-sabotage.

That's exactly what you'll get inside the Iron Forged Trading Program—a step-by-step process to become a consistently profitable trader in just 3 months.

Inside, you'll learn:

- ✓ How to predict price movements with precision
- ✓ The 10 best trading models I personally trust
- ✓ How to reprogram your subconscious and fix your psychology—forever

If you're serious about mastering trading and breaking free from inconsistency, check out the full program here:

 Iron Forged Trading Program

This could be the turning point in your trading journey. Let's make it happen.